Iran with an area of 1648195 square kilometers, located at the heart of the Middle East, connects Caspian Sea, the largest lake to Oman Sea from the north to the south. This special communication path makes Iran be of high importance to other countries. Many vast plains, high mountains, wilderness areas, rivers and lakes in Iran have turned it into a country with many different climates at the same time and in every season of the year. This feature is one of reasons of tourist attraction, and also shows the need and importance of heating and cooling systems at all months of the year and most areas of Iran, demanded by people and the tourists. Province of Tehran, with a population of 13 million, is the biggest province of Iran from the consumer market point of view, and is considered as the business center of Iran. City of Tehran is the biggest city and the capital of Iran, with a population of 8 million and an area of around 700 square kilometers. This city is located in the north of Iran and the south of Alborz Mountains. It is also considered as the 27th world's largest city, with a GDP of around $1 trillion dollars which has rated Tehran as the 56th richest city in the world. GDP of Tehran in 2012 was estimated 418 billion dollars, while almost half of the industrial activities of the country have implemented in Tehran, such as different food factories, electronics and electrical equipment, automotive equipment, cement, textiles, chemical materials, Iran's leading center for the sale of furniture products and carpet, and also Tehran refinery.

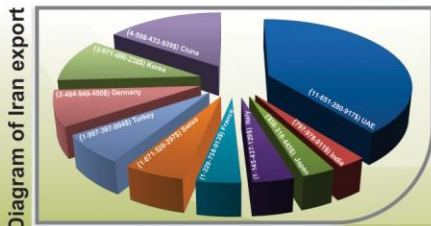

Oil and non-oil exports are some examples of Iran's export to the other countries. Various technical and engineering services, IT group services, tourism services, gas condensation, petrochemical, industrial products, carpet and hand-crafts, agricultural products and mining achievements are a number of things which are exported from Iran. Iran currently is experiencing an increasing growth in its manufacturing industry. Of course, growth and development in each industrial section calls for supplying and equipping its utility section, and along with continuity and dynamism of Iran industry, supplying and developing the sewage network, and also urban and suburban conduction of water is being implemented. On the other hand, along with industrial growth and as a result of an increase in workforce demand, migration from villages and also neighboring countries to industrial cities in Iran has increased. Therefore, the need of housing supply and thus, increasing growth in implementation of construction projects in the country, have boosted Iran utilities industry.

- Some examples of Iran construction—industry projects would be as follow:
- Implementation of more than 35% of sewage network project in 229 cities in Iran with a budget of 40 thousand billion Rials and 800 million dollars currency.
 - Implementation of hundreds of damming projects and conduction of water across the country.
 - Setting up steam generating units, phases 15 and 16, the south Pars gas field.

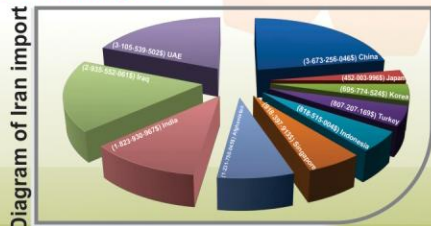

- 24000 construction projects in Ministry of Education with a budget of 5000 billion Rials.
- Implementation of airport construction, reforming, and development with budget of about 2000 billion Rials.
- Exploitation of more than 750 thousand units of Mehr housing.
- Inauguration of the most modern steel- ingot plant.
